The podcast Atlanta Monster, hosted by Payne Lindsey, addresses the murders of over two dozen African American children that took place in the late 1970s. “Manhunt,” the second episode of season one, focuses on identifying the child murderer, attempting to use racial profiling to identify the killer. Although the podcast felt very neutral and took every aspect of the argument into consideration, the episode leaves the audience with more questions than answers, unsure about which side has more merit. One needs to establish the facts and determine which scenario is more probably, regardless of which suspect is the most convenient.
